SCETV announces “Flow Fusion” winners, celebrating hip-hop artistry among teens and young adults

COLUMBIA, S.C. – South Carolina ETV and Public Radio (SCETV) is proud to announce the winners of Flow Fusion, a dynamic competition that celebrates the artistic prowess of teens and young adults in the thriving world of hip-hop. Inspired by the PBS documentary Fight the Power: How Hip Hop Changed the World, this competition invited young artists to contribute their unique talents to the ever-evolving hip-hop narrative.

The Flow Fusion competition was held Aug. 19 to Sept. 30 and encouraged talent to submit their work across various categories, including graffiti art, dance, lyrics, DJ and digital art. Young artists aged 13 to 22 demonstrated their creativity and passion, aligning with the documentary's themes that explore hip-hop's profound impact on society.

SCETV's Flow Fusion competition winners:

Graffiti Art (Ages 13 – 17)

Anime Meets Graffiti by Madison Scott
How Hip Hop Changed the World by Caleigh Petty

Graffiti Art (Ages 18 – 22)

Alyssa's Illusions by Alyssa Bender

DJ (Ages 13 – 17)

My Love by A'mya Pickett
Final Round by Shandon Kelly

Digital Art (Ages 13 – 17)

Rotoscoped Break Dancer by Daniel Jenkins
6ix Break Dance by Braxton Boone

Voting for the Flow Fusion competition was open to the community and took place from Oct. 2 - 6, allowing the public to engage with their favorite entries and share their support across social media platforms using #FlowFusion.

These winners will be prominently featured on the SCETV website, granting them well-deserved recognition for their contributions to hip-hop artistry. Additionally, they will each receive category-specific prizes aimed at nurturing their creative endeavors.

Flow Fusion remains a testament to the enduring legacy of hip-hop and its continued influence on culture and society. Through this competition, emerging artists have honored the past and helped shape the future of this transformative cultural movement.
